

Hana Giauque is a founding member of the performing group and music studio 7 City Strings as both a teacher and performer. Her performing career has taken her all over the globe, including Europe, China, the Philippines, and Canada. Her music dazzles audiences as she genre-hops from classical to fiddle to pop

Ms. Giauque studied Viola Performance with Dr. Claudine Bigelow at Brigham Young University with a minor in business and graduated with her masters studies with Nancy Buck at Arizona State University. As a conductor and teacher, Ms. Giauque believes that the two most important jobs are to educate and motivate, where motivation and inspiration take equal priority with education. Ms. Giauque is also a visual artist and enjoys mixing the visual experience with the bright and remarkable sound in her music. In her spare time, she likes to paint and play with her cat Beethoven, who is always her favorite practice buddy.
